Fragment of an incised censer lid which includes a portion of the rim. The incised surface is burned as is the paste interior, making it impossible to detect the presence of a fire core. The unscored surface has not been burned. There are abrasions (or perhaps brushmarks) which run parallel to the rim on both surfaces. The incisions continue to the rim on the scored side. The surface on both sides is fairly even - broken only by the incision and the abrasions. Hardness 1.8. No handle scars. No slip, paint, or applique.
